Seventeenth-Century
Wampanoag Gardens at Nauset

Before arriving at their cabins we entered a field planted with Indian corn in the way that we have already described. It was five and a half feet high. There was some less advanced planted later.

...they would come and set corne on the other side of the Brooke, and dwell there all Summer, which is hard by us:

Mourt's Relation

Afterwards they (as many as were able) began to plant their Corne, in which servise Squanto stood them in great stead, showing them both ye manner how to set it it, and after how to dress and tend it. Also he tould them excepte they gott fish and set with it (in these old grounds) it would come to nothing...
